The world's top scientists have concluded that our climate is changing and they have issued urgent warnings about our future we can't afford to ignore. The IPCC (Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change) reports leave no room for doubt: global warming is a fact. And human activity including the burning of fossil fuels, industrial emissions, and deforestation are the main cause of climate change and its most dangerous side effects. The dramatic rise in greenhouse gases over the last 250 years, particularly carbon dioxide, has caused temperatures to rise across the globe and this warming is projected to accelerate at an alarming and dangerous pace. Science is a powerful witness. Our world is undergoing a dramatic transformation. Dangerous atmospheric changes already observed and measured will continue for decades.
